SUES ROLLEY CO. FOR $25,000

Howard C. Cummings of this city, a laborer, who was thrown from a trolley car on June 3, 1920, at a curve on the line at Taftville, has brought suit against the Connecticut company for $25,000 damages for the injuries he received by reason of the accident. The suit is returnable before the superior court on the first Tuesday in September, papers having been filed Thursday at the office of Judge George E. Parsons, clerk of the court.

Cummings was thrown from the rear platform of the car by a sudden lurch. It is claimed: at the curve just north of the weave sheds of the Pomegranate mills. He landed on the ground and against a telephone pole, sustaining a fracture of the skull, injuries to his left shoulder and spine, with internal injuries, with shock to his system, and as a result of his injuries and shock has been unable to work at his employment as a laborer, at which he earned $4.95 per day, and he claims he will be permanently disabled from doing any hard physical labor and hereafter earning a livelihood.

In the complaint in the suit the trolley company charges with negligence and reason of the defective and dangerous condition of the rails and roadbed at the place of the accident, in failing to properly construct and maintain the tracks and roadbed, in failing to keep the wheel and appliances of the car in good and safe condition, in failing to keep closed the rear door on the east side of the car, and in operating the car at a dangerous rate of speed at this point.

Shields & Shields are attorneys for Mr. Cummings and attachments have been made against bank accounts of the trolley company in the Thames National bank of Norwich and the Second National bank of New Haven.

Suit for divorce and for alimony has been brought in the superior court by Elizabeth Westcott Green, of Norwich, against Frank E. Green of Ledyard, to whom she was married on the 24th of April this year. In asking alimony she alleges that her husband is worth $50,000 and she brings the divorce suit on the grounds of intolerable cruelty since the day of their wedding. She asks to have her name changed to Elizabeth Westcott. The papers in the case were drawn by Judge John H. Barnes and were filed on Tuesday, an attachment having been made on a 100-acre farm in Ledyard owned by Mr. Green.

The work of the year of the board of education of the blind was reviewed in the report of the secretary, Setaon K. Ryan, read at the annual meeting of the board at the office of the governor at 3 p. m. The report said that a new and hopeful viewpoint has come in work for the blind. It is as if the eyes of the people were opened and they had been permitted to see more nearly as he is. The work of the one who is without eyesight, the board, and growing the work is shown in the following part of the report:

The board has had $1 blind people, 21 of whom were adults, who have received educational advantages from the state the past year. This is a larger number than in any one previous year. The same was said last year's report. At the school for the blind the registration reached 51, and at the department of trades 12. At the first meeting of Farmington there were six who were enough to be accepted as pupils by the state, although more than a dozen other children were cared for who were not chargeable to the state. Six pupils were entered at Perkins institution at Watertown, Mass. One pupil was a student at Trinity college for part of the year, another was entered in business school in Hartford, while a third was given a course at a player action school in New York. One pupil was taught in his home.

We believe that the work for the blind will call for a higher degree of specialization, as state boards and commissions are now studying individual cases more carefully. The day when all blind people must be chair carriers, nutcrackers or broom makers is past. The field of endeavor which the blind person may enter is being widened. There is evidence of this in our work in Connecticut in the larger number of schools at which we have entered pupils. The past year two of our pupils were given special training at business schools in the use of the typewriter. One was trained in Boston and the other at a business school in Hartford. The former, a young woman, was helped to secure a position as dictaphone operator by this board with an insurance company.

In opening employment in the factories to the blind, there is being made the past year. There is now hardly a manufacturing city in eastern Connecticut in which one or more factories are not employing some blind or partially blind persons. The secretary has found large calls being made upon his time in an endeavor to secure this work for the blind in various parts of the state. It is a work, however, that has had its compensation. Not only have the blind operators been able to demonstrate their ability to do as good work as those with sight, but the companies have been able to save money by employing blind operators.

Our records show that there are now more than 25 factories in the state in which the blind are employed. Of these have two, even three, blind employees, and three factory officials have talked with the secretary about the feasibility of starting a department in their factory where only the blind would be employed.

Early in the calendar year, liquor, which had been manufactured from wood alcohol, was sent into this state. Some deaths resulted and some were rendered blind. The board communicated with every hospital in the state and located four persons who had lost their sight as a result of this poison. One of these men is now at the trades department, and the opportunities which the board has to offer have been extended to the others. It is the usual thing to find persons who have lost their sight slow to adjust themselves to new conditions. They frequently spend much money and time in trying different doctors in the hope of securing relief. It is not until they have been satisfied themselves that their case is hopeless that they welcome the offices of this board.
